Although there is a new poem on the title page, this edition is a copy of one of Landsberg’s Leipzig editions, as can be seen from the identical wording of the colophons. Landsberg also published a new edition in 1507 but the wording of the colophon of Thanner’s edition follows that of the 1504 Landsberg edition (Juv064). Thanner sets twenty-five lines to the page instead of twenty-three and thus saves five leaves.

The new poem on the title page consists of three elegiac couplets:

Ad iuuentutem.

Florea doctiloqui cole fcripta canora iuuentus
Vatis : preftabant commode mille tibi.
Inuenies morfus : et fulmina : diaq̄ dicta :
Crimina : virtutes : multijugofq̄ fales.
Mordaci in fatyra lepidiffimus ille poeta
Vertice fublimi fidera fumma ferit.

Greek words are transliterated in Satire IX and left blank in Satires VI and XI.
